— Ann Brown was a very happy child.

Ann Brown was born in Canada. There were not a lot of people in her small village. But all of them were friendly. They were also very nice. She went to the school of her village. Her parents were very interested in the well-being of their children.

She wasn't very happy then. She was lonely without her friends back in the village where she was born. She went to high school and university in the big city and made new friends.

She studied very hard and became a doctor. Finally, she moved back to her village and started taking care of the people she always knew were her best friends. She got married and has two children now.
